FXB SWITZERLAND

WHO ARE WE

The François-Xavier Bagnoud Association - FXB Switzerland is a non-governmental organization (NGO) that has been fighting against extreme poverty and social injustice since 1989. 20 million adults and children have already benefited from all of our actions.

OUR VISION

A world where everyone has a chance not only to survive, but to thrive.

OUR MISSION

Bring lasting change in the regions where we operate to eradicate extreme poverty and promote social justice and climate resilience.

OUR HISTORY

The story of FXB began in 1986, when the son of Albina du Boisrouvray and Bruno Bagnoud, François-Xavier, a helicopter pilot specializing in rescue, tragically lost his life at the age of 24 during a helicopter mission in Mali. Three years later, surrounded by her family and friends, Albina founded an organization that would bear the name of her only son and to which she would dedicate three-quarters of her assets. The objectives of FXB Switzerland are based on the values of generosity and rescue that guided François-Xavier Bagnoud's life.

"Neither we, nor his parents, nor his family, nor his friends know how Francis would have led his life, but we know for sure what the values that guided it were. He would have been proud and happy with what has been accomplished in his name over the past 35 years."

EDITORIAL

In 2024, the Association celebrated 35 years of commitment alongside the most vulnerable communities. Among the most at-risk groups, children remain the first to suffer from the many consequences of poverty. Financial insecurity, hunger, poor health, marginalization, illiteracy, and inadequate living conditions are all intertwined, creating a vicious cycle of deprivation that hinders the future of families.

Experiencing poverty in early childhood can leave a lasting mark – and in the most extreme cases, it can even cost a child's life. Deprivation during the first years of life causes long-term damage to health and cognitive development, undermining the potential of the adults they will become and threatening the well-being of future generations.

To break this cycle, FXB focuses on addressing the root causes of poverty. This is the most effective way to ensure children and youth can fully realize their fundamental rights – to survival, education, training, growth, and development.

As early as 1989, FXB took a strong stand by co-organizing, with Médecins du Monde, a symbolic pilgrimage – The Road of Children's Rights – linking Nantes to New York to advocate for the adoption of the Convention on the Rights of the Child by the United Nations. Welcomed by then-Secretary-General Javier Pérez de Cuéllar, the children participating in the march presented a powerful declaration urging governments around the world to ratify this historic treaty.

Today, FXB continues to place children and youth at the heart of its actions. Through its projects, the organization works to promote education, training, health, and the protection of the rights of children and women. Through the FXBVillage programs, FXB also strengthens the economic and social capacities of families and empowers mothers.

Our ultimate mission is to provide every parent with the means to protect and raise their children in dignity and safety – so that a new generation can grow up free, educated, and resilient.

Together, let us continue this commitment that has been changing lives for 35 years. Thank you for continuing to walk alongside us.

Four major objectives structure FXB's action and programs:

● Effectiveness of children's rights

On November 20, 1989, the United Nations General Assembly adopted the International Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC).

For the first time, rights were recognized for all children around the world: every child has rights to family, health, education, justice and social protection.

All states, except the United States, have ratified the Convention.

In line with Albina du Boisrouvray's founding commitment to the protection of vulnerable children, FXB makes children's rights the heart of its actions, with each of its programs aiming to make them effective in their daily lives, as defined by the Convention.

● Eradication of extreme poverty through access to fundamental rights and the empowerment of women

Poor people face multiple complex challenges: malnutrition, disease, lack of income, lack of or unsanitary housing, illiteracy, lack of drinking water or even unfavorable climatic conditions.

To eradicate these multiple causes of poverty, a piecemeal approach is not enough. Only a comprehensive approach can combat poverty and sustainably address the real needs of local populations.

Our success in the fight against extreme poverty is based precisely on a holistic and pioneering model of economic and community development based on access to fundamental rights: the FXBVillage model.

Launched in 1991, the program provides a comprehensive three-year response to the root causes of poverty. It simultaneously addresses key factors such as access to economic empowerment, healthy housing and environments, food security, education and training, healthcare and prevention, and climate resilience. Combating poverty also involves tackling discrimination, particularly gender-based discrimination. Women – who are disproportionately affected by poverty – must have equal access to economic and social opportunities. Promoting their rights and reducing gender inequality are essential to achieving the Sustainable Development Goals by 2030.

Access to fundamental rights and the empowerment of women are therefore essential levers for eradicating extreme poverty. FXBVillage activities also enhance the capacity of communities to take action and drive their own development.

● Gender equality and reduction of gender-based violence

Equality between women and men is not only a fundamental human right, it is also a prerequisite for the possibility of a prosperous and sustainable world.

Promoting women's economic rights and justice, and reducing gender disparities, are essential to achieving the 2030 Agenda and the Sustainable Development Goals.

For 35 years, FXB has been committed to defending the rights of women and children, as well as preventing all forms of violence and insecurity against them.

Because women play a key role in community development, FXB implements specific activities to strengthen their skills, facilitate access to sustainable economic opportunities, and empower them as agents of change – in particular by encouraging active participation in family and community decision-making.

It also involves raising community awareness about domestic and sexual violence and gender equality. This awareness-raising is essential for preventing such violence, supporting victims, and promoting egalitarian relationships. It helps deconstruct gender stereotypes and establish social norms that reject violence, thus fostering safer and more inclusive environments.

● Adaptation to climate change

FXB believes that climate change and poverty are inextricably linked, and that the problems of poverty and climate change exacerbate each other.

Although they are the least responsible, the populations of the most vulnerable countries are on the front line of the consequences of climate change.

In fragile countries, a single flood destroying a microenterprise or a drought decimating crops or livestock can push families into poverty.

To effectively fight poverty, development policies must address climate change and its impact on vulnerable populations.

In light of the disproportionate impacts of climate change on poor countries, FXB is working to promote Sustainable Development Goal 13: Take urgent action to combat climate change and its impacts.

At the same time, FXB USA runs an education and advocacy program, FXB Climate Advocates, which aims to empower young people (ages 13-25) around the world to implement climate solutions in their communities and globally.

FXB's work focuses on climate resilience and adaptation measures for local communities, including:

- Promoting ecological and resilient agricultural practices.
- Diversification of agricultural activities to better anticipate the effects of extreme weather conditions.
- Promoting the cultivation of home gardens or small plots for food self-sufficiency.
- Raising awareness of sustainable consumption, water conservation, recycling, solar energy use, and disaster risk reduction.
- Promoting solutions such as improved stoves to reduce air pollution and deforestation.

FOCUS ON THE FXBVILLAGE MODEL

What is the FXBVillage model?

FXB initiated this holistic poverty reduction approach (Graduation approach) in 1991 to simultaneously address five key underlying factors: economic poverty, unsanitary housing and poor environmental conditions, malnutrition, limited access to healthcare, and limited access to education and information.

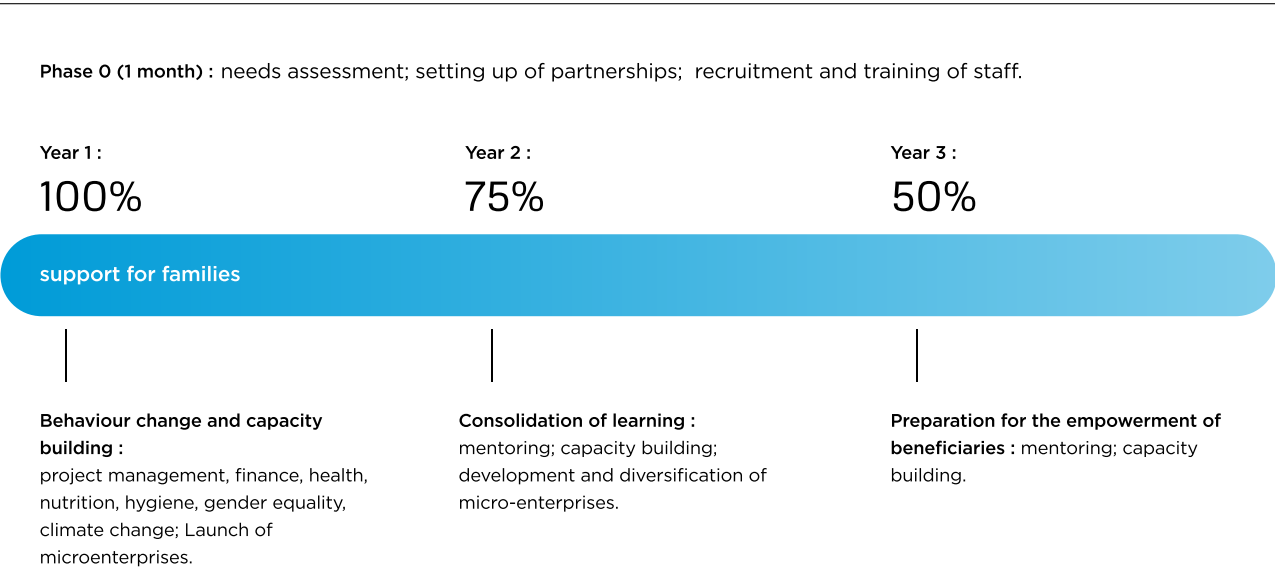

Each of our FXBVillage projects - 211 since 1991 - connects families who receive decreasing support for three years, the time needed to move from a situation of extreme poverty to lasting economic and social autonomy.

The fundamental pillar of our model is economic empowerment. Its main innovation lies in the donation of seed capital—instead of a loan—which, combined with training in business management and financial literacy, will enable families to launch income-generating activities (microenterprises). They will thus generate sufficient income to meet their daily needs, protect and raise their children, and prosper after the program ends.

Simultaneously with economic strengthening, FXB ensures that each member of the supported families can access their fundamental human rights through four other pillars: clean housing and environment, food security, education and crucial information on health and social issues, and adequate health services.

Fighting poverty also involves addressing all forms of discrimination, particularly gender-based discrimination. This means promoting gender equality so that women – who are disproportionately affected by poverty – can access the same economic and social opportunities as men.

90% of beneficiaries achieve economic and social autonomy within 3 years.

FOCUS ON THE FXBVILLAGE MODEL

The Strengths of the FXBVillage Model

- ENSURING SUSTAINABLE AUTONOMY: Every aspect of the FXBVillage model is designed to ensure lasting impact. Rather than creating dependency on external aid, FXB strengthens the overall capabilities of participants. Through their own efforts and commitment, each participant achieves lasting improvements in their quality of life. At the heart of the model is the individual: we support each person in fulfilling their potential. As families gradually gain the ability to meet their own needs, FXB's financial support is progressively reduced.
- ADDRESSING THE MULTIPLE CAUSES OF POVERTY: Poverty is multidimensional and not simply a lack of income. Poor people face a variety of complex challenges, such as malnutrition, lack of clean water, limited access to education and information, disease, poor housing and environmental conditions, discrimination and social exclusion, and adverse climatic conditions.

15 FXBVillage projects were underway in 2024 in Burundi, Mongolia, Myanmar, Namibia, Rwanda, and Uganda.

This means that 31,379 adults and children receive decreasing support over three years: the time needed to move from a situation of extreme poverty to lasting economic and social independence.

After completing training in finance and project management, they received a small start-up capital to launch microenterprises and are actively involved in Village Savings and Loan Associations (VSLAs).

At the same time, families are receiving decreasing support to access food security, appropriate health care, and to cover the costs of children's schooling and youth training, as well as improving their housing and WASH infrastructure.

Project participants and members of surrounding communities also have the opportunity to strengthen their knowledge in key areas of health and social issues, thus contributing to their overall development and the sustainability of the project's impact on their quality of life.

Since the early 2000s, the FXBVillage Poverty Reduction Model has been regularly evaluated. A real impact on the economic, health, and social status of children and adults has been demonstrated.

Context

Inequality in South Africa remains among the highest in the world, compounded by massive unemployment, which primarily affects young people and women. In neighborhoods like Soweto, Witbank, and Nigel, poverty, violence, and HIV severely affect families, some of which are headed by children. More than 80% of 10-year-olds cannot read properly.

Focus on our innovative and holistic approach

FXB's approach in South Africa is both innovative and holistic, as it is based on three distinct but closely linked and cross-cutting projects that target the same children and their families.

Each project has its own specific objective:

- Support children academically and psychosocially,
- Empower mothers,
- Promote gender equality and combat gender-based violence within communities.

Together, these projects form a coherent and complementary approach that strengthens education, economic empowerment, and social cohesion, leading to sustainable impact.

FXB implements after-school support programs for children and youth and strengthens the economic and social skills of vulnerable women. In 2024, a new gender reconciliation project was launched to prevent violence through dialogue and community engagement.

They are part of a global initiative that sustainably improves the lives of children and their communities. This inclusive dynamic enables beneficiaries to become agents of change, bringing solutions to their families and communities.

Context :

Burundi remains one of the most disadvantaged countries in the world, facing persistent challenges in terms of access to education, healthcare and sustainable sources of income for its population.

In 2024, FXB in Burundi continued to strengthen its institutional capacity and expand its reach. The organization is also emerging as a key actor in the community health insurance sector.

Focus on a project: TUVUZANYE Community Health Mutual

In the provinces of Bujumbura and Kayanza, FXB promotes a community health mutual fund called TUVUZANYE, which translates from Kirundi as "Let's take care of each other." The goal is to contribute to improving the health of members of the targeted communities, more specifically by increasing members' access to health care services.

This mutual insurance company represents a viable alternative to the government-backed Health Insurance Card, which is chronically underfunded and not very popular with healthcare providers.

The development plans include expanding geographical coverage, increasing community involvement, establishing a mutualist federation, and achieving financial self-sufficiency for the system.

By the end of 2024, TUVUZANYE had 20,000 members spread across ten municipalities, including all beneficiaries of the current FXBVillage projects.

Context :

Namibia is a middle-income country. However, its per capita income is highly skewed, with 55% of income falling on 10% of the population. Socioeconomic inequalities inherited from the apartheid years persist, with 30% of the young working population unemployed.

In 2024, FXB and its partner HISA implemented 5 projects, 2 of which have been completed. Indeed, during the year, a monitoring phase of the gender-based violence prevention project was implemented to ensure the sustainability of past interventions and services.

Project Focus: Strengthening the capacities of civil society organizations for young people and women

The objective is to strengthen the capacity of community initiatives and associations to promote gender equality and youth inclusion by implementing effective, context-specific interventions in peri-urban areas across three regions of Namibia.

The project targets 150 civil society organizations (CSOs), providing them with support and capacity-building so they can, in turn, deliver improved services to 10,000 community members – including women and girls, young people, and other vulnerable populations.

In addition, an FXBVillage project was completed after successfully supporting 100 families from the slums of Windhoek on their path to economic and social independence. Building on this success, FXB launched a new economic and community development project in previously unserved neighborhoods of the area.

Alongside this project, an innovative vertical hydroponic farm—specifically designed for the Namibian desert context—is currently under development.

Uganda has a population of 46 million, more than a third of whom live below the poverty line. It ranks 166th out of 191 countries on the UNDP Human Development Index. Children are the primary victims of this situation, as their families are unable to ensure their health and well-being.

In 2024, the local FXB branch launched an FXBVillage project and completed a clean water access initiative for the population of Wakiso District, on the outskirts of the capital, Kampala.

Focus on a project: Access to water

Since 2022, 50 water sources and wells have been rehabilitated and/or constructed, providing millions of liters of clean water to nearly 40,000 people in the district.

To ensure sustainability, the project focused on training community volunteers to support beneficiaries and assist local leaders in establishing water user committees. These formalized structures define the rules and responsibilities for managing each water source. The project also includes a community awareness component on water, hygiene, and sanitation issues.

More than 13,000 people have been reached through collective awareness sessions held in communities and schools.

Rwanda is one of the few countries that has been able to achieve most of the UN Millennium Development Goals. Substantial progress has been made in reducing poverty, education, and HIV prevalence. Despite these successes, Rwanda remains a poor country facing significant development challenges.

FXBVillage - Economic and Community Development

Our FXBVillage Economic and Community Development model (p.8) provides, over a three-year period, a comprehensive response to the root causes of multidimensional poverty by simultaneously addressing five of its main drivers: lack of income, malnutrition, limited access to healthcare, education and information, and unsanitary housing and environmental conditions.

This approach supports 1,200 families living in extreme poverty—8,500 adults and children—on the path to financial and social independence.

In 2024, FXB continued to expand the FXBVillage model across four districts in the country. Two additional health-focused projects, including one on malnutrition management, benefited 14,190 adults and children. Meanwhile, the initiative to improve access to local herbal products through the creation of a social enterprise continues to grow and is currently awaiting certification.

Furthermore, to extend the impact of this program, FXB is gradually establishing Village Savings and Credit Associations (VSLAs) for 2,000 community members and their highly vulnerable families—reaching a total of 10,000 people—to strengthen their resilience to socio-economic shocks and improve their access to basic services.

Context :

While India ranks among the world's five largest economies, half of its population lives in poverty, and nearly one-third in extreme poverty, according to the UNDP.

Human trafficking and child abuse—including forced labor and early marriage—remain among the most severe human rights violations in the country. Despite legislative reforms, women continue to face extreme vulnerability, including discrimination, sexual harassment, rape, domestic violence, and honor killings.

In 2024, the Child Sexual Abuse and Trafficking Prevention Project had a significant impact. It raised awareness among communities in several villages, reintegrated out-of-school children into the school system, supported orphaned children or those living with a single parent, addressed cases of abuse or trafficking, and created safe spaces adapted to the needs of children.

In 2024, FXB developed 1 project in the field of protection, affecting 37,122 direct beneficiaries, including 19,144 girls and women, as well as 148,488 community members.

Project Focus: Preventing and Responding to Child Sexual Abuse and Trafficking in Jharkhand.

Launched in 2022, this initiative aims to reduce the vulnerability of children from indigenous tribes in the districts of Pakur, Godda and Dumka (Jharkhand) to human trafficking and sexual abuse.

Implemented in tribal villages, the project—now in its third year—pursues several objectives: strengthening local institutions, improving child exploitation prevention, building the capacity of service providers, providing direct support to victims, and raising awareness among policymakers.

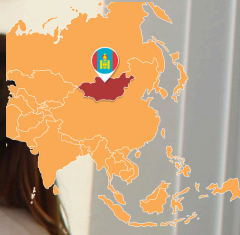

In 2024, the project to prevent sexual abuse and child trafficking reached a significant level of impact:

- 5,098 community members trained in 60 villages on child protection and anti-trafficking issues;
- 120 children who had dropped out of school were reintegrated into school, and 100 orphaned children or those living with a single parent received specific support;
- 25 cases of trafficking or abuse handled, and 64 child-friendly centers (Bal Mitra Kendra) set up for safe reception.

Context

In the southeastern province of Dornogobi, more than 67,000 people live in the heart of the Gobi Desert steppe. Vulnerable families in this region face several major challenges: limited access to employment, unsustainable sources of income, limited opportunities for vocational training, a lack of start-up capital to start microenterprises, and insufficient knowledge of income management and savings.

FXB's goal is to help families create opportunities in their own region rather than migrating to Ulaanbaatar, where nearly half of the country's population is crammed, often in very precarious conditions. Thus, a third economic and community development project, FXB Village, which will be completed in 2025, allows us to provide a comprehensive response to the root causes of poverty while simultaneously addressing its predominant factors.

Focus on a project: Strengthening education and encouraging reading.

This initiative aims to facilitate sustainable access to books for children and families. Following an initial phase marked by strong interest in reading among children, we are intensifying efforts to develop two community and school libraries. The project also ensures continued access to books in the most remote areas of the desert through a mobile library. It combines the continuity of existing initiatives with the development of a sustainable, community-rooted model.

Dornogobi II Economic and Community Development	In progress	432	This project builds on the core principles of the FXB Village model and adapts them to the Mongolian context, which is less affected by inadequate health services or severe malnutrition, but rather characterized by specific gaps and a stark lack of economic opportunities.
Strengthen education and encourage reading	In progress	1,300	To address the pandemic's impact on children's education and isolation, FXB launched an after-school education project focused on personal development through reading. A permanent library in Sainshand and a mobile library in the Gobi Desert provide access to 1,200 books and weekly educational activities, fostering the social and cultural development of children in isolated communities.

Context

In 2021, the military's return to power ended nearly a decade of democratic transition. The crisis intensified armed conflicts between the junta and various ethnic armed groups. Recent years, marked by unprecedented levels of suffering, have been deeply traumatic for the population. Nearly half of the population now lives below the poverty line.

In Mon State, an FXBVillage program (see p.8) has helped 200 families achieve economic and social independence. Our fixed and mobile vocational training activities, for their part, offer various training courses in the fields of sewing, weaving, hospitality, and wood and metalworking to some 250 young people each year. They are also supported in their job searches or launching into self-entrepreneurship.

FXB also promotes access to sexual and reproductive health services and related rights, as well as the elimination of violence against women and girls. It manages shelters for survivors of violence in a country where entrenched discrimination perpetuates a culture of impunity and tolerance for violations of women's rights.

Focus on a project: FXB Floating clinics

To ensure access to adequate health and preventative care for isolated populations living along the Irrawaddy River, two cruise ships have been converted into floating clinics. Each is equipped with a consultation room, a pharmacy, and space to perform minor surgical procedures, gynecological consultations, and dental and ophthalmological care.

Training to community members is also provided on health prevention, WASH, sexual and reproductive health, and gender-based violence.

50,000 health services have already been provided, significantly contributing to improving access to healthcare, reaching more than 40% of the population in the catchment area. Furthermore, to compensate for the collapse of the healthcare system and enhance the project's impact, 400 community health workers have been trained. They play a crucial role in their communities by providing first aid, home-based neonatal care, and promoting knowledge about health, sexual and reproductive health, and gender-based violence.

Economic and social empowerment		1,016	The FXBVillage model is a holistic, three-year program designed to combat extreme poverty. It supports ultra-poor families on their path to economic self-sufficiency, while improving their access to decent housing, healthcare, nutrition, education, and information. The model is based on an integrated approach to the fundamental rights of children and adults, with a strong focus on building resilience and empowering women.

Context

Switzerland has a tradition of hospitality towards asylum seekers and has adopted a relatively benevolent policy towards those fleeing persecution and conflict in their home countries. However, reception infrastructure can sometimes be lacking when it comes to mental health.

Focus on the project: The Green Escape

Located in the canton of Valais, The Green Escape (L'Échappée Verte) is a therapeutic, inclusive, and biodiversity-friendly micro-farm dedicated to asylum seekers and people on social assistance experiencing mental health challenges. To support their integration, the initiative aims to bring structure to their daily lives by engaging them in meaningful work that helps rebuild self-confidence and reduce social isolation.

Participants are guided through outdoor activities and agricultural work designed to foster a connection with nature. In addition to enjoying the fruits of their labor, they receive psychosocial support in a non-institutional setting that is less intimidating than traditional structures.

The integration of asylum seekers is indeed hampered by various obstacles, including fragile mental health. Migration journeys, often traumatic, leave serious psychological scars that require special attention.

In 2024, the project supported 20 participants aged 18 to 72, representing 13 different nationalities. Seven of them exited the program during the year for highly positive reasons, such as securing paid employment or reintegrating into a mainstream integration pathway—outcomes that had previously seemed out of reach due to their psychosocial instability.
